DANTE described the damned in Hell biting at each other's skulls. The horror seems impossible, but tsn't.

In Raymond Street Jail a prisoner secretly ground a soup spoon handle to razor edge and with it savagely stabbed a fellow prisoner, "Red" Moran. In prison, or in Hell, bitter hatreds endure.

THIS "Red" Moran, who killed two policemen, said at his trial, "I want to boin in de chair," meaning that he wanted to be burned in the electric chair. Talking the language of the gutter that bred him, stabbed by another criminal, "Red' Moran, 24 years old, shows how poor a chance such men have in life.

Lebrix and Costes had flown across the Atlantic ocean and two continents since they took off from Paris, last October. Arriving here today, they had concluded one of the most re-markable long distance flights in the

A cheer went up from the assembled throng as they glided easily to the ground to a perfect landing. They were met by members of Mayor Walker's committee on reception to dis-tinguished guests and a five-day program of welcome in their honor has been arranged.

Walsh Enters Motion.

He set 9:30 Tuesday morning as the hour for hearing the defense motion.

This morning's proceedings lasted less than ten minutes. Contending that Hickman had been deprived of the right of a trial by jury, due to the proceedings under the new California law governing the defense of insanity in criminal cases, Jerome Walsh, chief counsel for Hickman, entered the motion for a new trial on the grounds that the proceedings were in contravention of both the federal and state constitution.

Hickman smiled as he entered the courtroom. He was ordered by Superior Judge J. J. Grabucco to stand Defense Counsel Jerome Walsh and Richard Cantillon stood up on either side of Hickman. "Yes, your honor," Walsh interrupt-

It was regarded as virtually cer-tain that Hickman's case will go to the California supreme court. It Judge Trabucco denies defense attorneys' request for a new trial, an appeal will probably be taken to the higher tribunal based on the contention that the new statute under which

Hickman was tried is unconstitutional. The new law, which allowed Hickman to enter a plea of "not guilty by reason of insanity," places only the question of sanity in the hands of the jury, leaving the determination of the degree of guilt up to the judge. From this particular phase of the law, Hickman's attorneys are expected to mold their argument of unconstitutionality in the event that their request for a new trial is denied.

Frigidaire Dealer Returns Home From Meeting in Dayton

More electric refrigerators will be installed in 1928 than in any previous year in the history of the business, according to J. M. Carnahan, local Frigidaire dealer who has returned from a regional convention of Frigidaire corporation held recently in Dayton. At this convention Carnahan saw new household models exhibited for the first time and inspected a new electric water cooler that has been added to the Frigidaire line.

Twenty executives of Frigidaire corporation were in attendance at the convention, which was one of a series of eight held during February.

Facts presented at the meeting, Carnahan said, clearly indicated that 1928 will see more Frigidaires installed than in any previous year in the organizations history.

"A very interesting fact brought out at the convention was that Frigidaire is being installed in all types of homes," said Carnahan. In 1927, fully one-fourth of the equipment sold on extended payments was purchased for families having an annual income of $2,000 or less, it was stated."

Justice Is Not Insane

William Edward Hickman, brutal kidnaper and slayer of 12-year-old Marian Parker whose multilated body was thrown into the arms of a grief-stricken father after he paid $1,500 ransom money, will learn his fate today.

The fiend's plea, "Not guilty, by reason of sanity," was of no avail after a jury of four women and eight men, sitting in the trial at Los Angeles, heard the state and defense stories of a crime that has few, if any parallels, for hideousness.

The jurors declared the former Kansas City high school student, who jokes that "they tell me there are thirteen steps up to the rope, and I don't choose to run." was sane when he abducted the innocent girl and equally rational when he hacked her body.

The young California criminal, who copied his defense from an Ohioan, who originated the spacious, double-barreled plea to escape the penalty for killing his wife in cold blood, learned to his dismay that Pacific coast juries are not as easily wrought up to a high pitch of admiration and pity for the killer as Buckeye

Every few years some new legal device is invented to keep criminals from paying the penalty of their crimes. We have had "brainstorms" and "unwritten laws," etc. to the point of nausea. And now "not guilty by reason

But the Los Angeles jury in the Hickman case has put a damper on the possibility of men and women slaying for anger or jealousy or envy or revenge or profit, and then plously lifting up their hands and declaring that they are irresponsible and guiltless because they were in a state of "temporary maniacal insanity." The Hickman jury was not fooled by lawyers or alien-1sts or misplaced sympathy.

And when the expected death sentence is meted out in Los Angeles today, it will prove that justice herself is not temporarily insone. A few more verdicts of this kind will force killers to look for a defense other than

Scrapping Navies

A strange misconception prevails in this country regarding the British and American naval demobilization after the war. Most Americans believe that our government scrapped a greater tonnage than Britain. The facts are precisely the contrary. They were given in detail in an article by J. Bernard Walker in the Scientific American, written after thorough investiga-

What Britain really did should be better known. At the time of the armistice Britain was supreme on the sea, with 1,354 combatant vessels of 3,250,000 tons, besides auxiliary vessels. Her navy surpassed the combined navies of all her competitors-America, France, Italy and Japan. She might have kept her supremacy.

Instead, Britain started in immediately reducing her fighting fleet. She agreed to the Washington naval reduction plans because they fitted in with her own. She willingly discarded absolute supremacy at sea, for equality with the United States.

Before the Washington treaty was officially in effect, she had destroyed 1.500,000 tons of warships. She destroyed, in accordance with that pact, 18 modern, wartested dreadnoughts of 473.570 tons before France signed it, and before the United States had destroyed a single ship. She also scrapped pre-dreadnoughts of 344,-800 tons. The United States destroyed only 195,443 tons of dreadnoughts and 302,749 tons of pre-dreadnoughts.

The ships scrapped by Britain-most of them voluntarily-included the following impressive list:

- 38 dreadnoughts and pre-dreadnoughts;
- 33 cruisers, armored and unarmored; 55 light, speedy cruisers;
- 10 flotilla leaders over 30 knots;
- 277 destroyers 27 to 30 knots;
- 95 torpedo boats;
- 20 monitors built during war; 116 submarines:
- 4 aircraft carriers.

By Britain's own action we have gained naval equality with her, without new construction. Britain has not built above her treaty obligations since that monumental job of scrapping, and shows no desire to.

Fair play and good sportsmanship demand that American recognize these facts.

Benefactor of Mankind

Has any American of this generation done more for the happiness of those around her than Mrs. Frank Searles of Cherokee, Ia?

Mrs. Searles makes pies. She had baked 185.455 pies in the last eight years, up to Jan. 1, and has kept right on turning them out at the rate of 65 a day, and cutting them up in generous portions for an insatiable pub-

Apple or mince or raisin or pumpkin or berry or cream-it's all the same to this artist, and every pie is a chef-d'oeuvre. She makes her own filling, putting it up by the hundreds of gallons. Between pies she helps to run a restaurant and takes care of an aged mother

Since the laborer is worthy of her hire, it is good to know that this practical philanthropist reaps a practical reward. Eight years ago Mr. and Mrs. Searles hadn't much of anything except Mrs. Searles' God-given genius. Now they own their restaurant building and several other buildings, and are abounding in prosper-

It should be so, and doubtless will be, for anyone who feeds his neighbors equally well. The eagerness with which men seek out the best mouse trap, though in a wilderness, is nothing to the avidity with which they go after good grub.

The starlings, imported from England, are now becoming so plentiful and offensive that people begin to have a kindly feeling for the English sparrows.

A good many people, discouraged by failure, take new hope from the discovery that when Lindbergh goes fishing, he seldom catches anything.

An American traveler wants to introduce canoes in Venice. No use. Speedboats would follow right along and drive them out.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 11.-During the last year three extremely horrible murders, committed in as many widely separated sections of the country, and the fact that one of the states does not provide the death penalty, that one of them condemns first degree mur-derers to death by hanging, that the third punishes with death by electrocution, and that in the last case a woman together with a man was sentenced to death and suffered her punishment, has brought the subject of capital punishment to the fore again.

Perhaps there has never been a time when proponents of each side of the question were so sure of the truth and justice of the cause they are pleading.

In the United States there is no code requiring the death penalty which applies alike to all states and pos-sessions. The federal code providing capital punishment for murder, and treason applies to crimes which are committed on government reservations or property Each state, territory, and possession has its own laws which provides penalties for various crimes.

But taking simply the fact that one human being deprives another of life and that society must determine what to do with the murderer, there are two najor arguments on which those for and against the death pen alty base their reasoning. These are the Masiac law of "an eye for an eye," and the value of capital punish-ment as a deterrent. The first rests on the principle that if a man kills, he must pay for it in like coin, and the second on the value of taking life in order to prevent

As usual, the same statistics are used to prove both ides of the case concerning the value of capital pun shment as a deterrent, especially since the criminal tatistics of the United States are admittedly inade-

Those who believe that capital punishment prevents ourder claim that only the fear of death instills a re ard for human life in the hearts of men who kill; that he knowledge that death awaits him stays the hand of he man who loses his temper or feels that he is justiied in such violence, just as it restrains the profession-I bad man. Opponents of this theory declare that the aan who kills in a rage, or in great stress of circumtance, does not think of the penalty, and that the proessional bad man knows that it is harder to get a coniction when the penalty of death may be incurred.

Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney of Illinois, says: " arge capital punishment for murder 1-ot because I believe that society wishes to take the life of a murderer, ut because society does not wish to lose its own. I dvocate this extreme and irrevocable punishment be ause the punishment is commensurate with the crime. t is the finality of the death penalty which instills fear nto the heart of every murderer, and it is this fear of unishment which protects society. Murderers are not punished for revenge."

The testimony of Louis E. Lawes, the warden whose The testimony of Louis E. Lawes, the warden whose duty it was recently to put a woman to death, is worth noting. "I am not asking that we abandon a scheme of punishment that is in successful operation," he says.

One Bye Colling and Talmany the American girl as the magazine with their beauty have frequently gone like a shot to theatrical and screen stardom. "We have capital punishment and have had it for generations, yet we have a high homicide rate in shameful contrast to the rest of the civilized world. The deterrent effect of a law seems not to depend on the ugliness of its threat, but rather on the certainty and celerity with which the threatening gesture reaches home."

At the present time there are eight states where capital punishment is retained absolutely, thirty-two arres, prize fights and wrestling bouts, where the court or jury may choose between it and life imprisonment, and eight where it has been abolished.

The majority are able to pay for their admissions and the performance does

A Harrison Fisher girl is a star in imprisonment, and eight where it has been abolished. Two of the state where capital punishment has been abolished provide it for a second offense, such as the killing of a guard in prison. The states that do not provide coults are the states that do not provide according to the states that do not provide a state in the movies. Three models have committed suicide, one was murdered and any number have risen to the indoprovide capital punishment are: Maine, Rhode Island, Michigan, Wisconsin, North Dakota, South Dakota, Kansas and Minnesota.

Abe Lincoln Was Great Because He Was Human!

Abe never under-estimated the importance of the power of the human heart, properly directed. He knew why little children cried at night in the dark, why men face a crisis with their knees cringing, and why other men bravely faced the vicissitudes of existence with a stalwart face.

Abe Lincoln, protector of millions of souls, never forgot that a million souls are a million individuals. Soldiers and casual acquaintance he met in the attitude of one who asked, with Victor Hugo: "Why are we such devils to one another?"

Individual consideration — Individual attention — are the keynotes of American security. Institutions such as ours that deal with the financial problems that govern much of the countries happiness must properly serve in an individual way.

It is Our Policy to Treat Our Clientele in the Attitude of One Man to Another -Hence Our Rapidly Growing Popularity.

Wildblood's Field Goal Sews Up Game for Blue

Blonde Forward Curves One in From Mid-floor With Eight Seconds to go; Final Count is 15-12.

"I shot an arrow into the air, it fell to earth I knew not where -" so goes the old verse.

But-Jimmy Wildblood shot a chunk of inflated leather into the air last night at Wellsville and 500 frenzied floor fans saw it fall, cleanly, prettily, through the harried meshes of a hostile basket. They knew where it fell, knew that it signalized an East Liverpool victory by a three-point margin, 15-12, and knew that as it sank, so the hopes of a desperate band of Orange and Black were plunged irretrievably into the abyss of defeat.

With eight seconds of play remaining of the final eight-minute period the victory. Jimmy Wildblood's six and the Blue leading by a score of points were high for the winners-and 13-12 the ball left Wildblood's finger timely! But tonight's another night and another game. East Palestine high, another county opponent, will be here to battle Joe Hurst's Potters.

Three games are scheduled, including two preliminaries. Girls' teams will meet in one of the openers and the Reserves will take on Midland Reserves in another, beginning at 7:15.

atrocious. Both teams were guilty under the indictment. Heart breaking efforts that bobbled off and around the rims brought gasps from the 500 that saw the battle. Hostile baskets, both of

The victory was the second for East Liverpool over the Wellsville five this year, and both games were battles. It will take but little to tell the story, so far as the points are concerned and the points are the important part of the game.

After several minutes of strategic feints and thrusts, English popped one in from the corner of the floor to break the ice.

At this juncture, English took Went to a forward. Snowden cut to the basket, took a pass and turned in two points. Davy Feit warmed into action with a two-pointer from the corner and a couple of minutes later he repeated. Weekley dropped in a foul as the half ended with the Blue leading 12 to 8. 1928 Olympic Games Start At St. Moritz

Winter Events Launched in Blinding Blizzard.

ST. MORITZ, Swtzerland, Feb. 11.-In a blinding blizzard which covered spectators, participants and the gen-eral scene with a shifting curtain of white, the 1928 Olympic games opened today as the winter sports competition got under way.

The opening was attended by the traditional procession of the competing athletes—representing 25 nations—around the big rink. As the athletes took the Olympic oath with right hand raised, they seemed like snowmen and were scarcely discernable to the thousand or so spectators who sat huddled in the stands.

Today's program consists of four hockey matches, Canaca, which won the hockey competition in 1924, was an overwhelming favorite to retain her laurels. With the United States not represented in this sport, there appeared to be no stiff opposition in sight for the Scandinavian countries were favored to win a majority of the winter sports events, although in some of the games they were expected to be keenly opposed by Canada and the United States.

A Thrilling Story of the Night Clubs By Phillip Dunning and George Abbott, That's intermission," informed Steve, speaking to Porky. "You go out now and keep our visitors from coming back here, and don't be ubbering at McCorn—act unconcerned.' "Sure," said the little fat man, starting out. After a word from Steve, Dolph followed Porky.

In the confusion of gathering up props and pieces of costumes, Katie, the cigarette girl, was not noticed when she gave a note to Pearl, nor was the mysterious girl's reply heard as she finished reading: "Tell him I'll come as soon as I've changed," she said, and superior Katie mumbled something and drifted away. Pearl thoughtfully climbed the stairs, the note crumbled in her white hand.

Billie and Mazie were the last two performers to start for their dressing rooms. Steve called after them. "Billie, I've been waiting here for half an hour trying to get a word with you."

The Moore girl paused; hesitated, then came back lown the stairs, meeting Steve at the bottom step.

Mazie, smiling wisely, continued on her way.

"What is it, Mr. Crandall?"

"When I was out in front watching you, I saw that something was missing," said Steve, looking down at her bare wrists. "Didn't you like the bracelet?"

Billie flushed and giggled self-consciously. "Oh, of sourse I did-awfully-I thought it was lovely-"Then why don't you wear it?" he asked, gently, devouring her with his eyes.

"Well—I—" she stammered, confused—"well—Mr.

Crandall, I'll explain about it a little later when we've got time." She turned to run up the stairs.

"We've got time now," he insisted. "This is the intermission, isn't it?"
"Yes, but—I—I mean—"

Steve suddenly reached out and took her hand. "No really, I want to know. I'm proud of you, little fella—so I thought it would be nice of you to wear my brace-"I-I did wear it for a while," the girl said, trying to break away. "If you don't like it, I'll take it back to Tiffany's and change it," he suggested.

Billie protested-"Oh, I'm just crazy about it!" "Then why'd you take it off?" His hand was tight and moist over hers.

"Well, Ruby began making some dirty cracks about it—and then I got wise to what it really meant." She broke off in confusion.

"What does it mean?" pursued Steve, relentlessly.
"I guess you know," Billie panted, glancing up at him She was bewitching, all confused like this! "No tell me," he urged, gently, "I just thought it was a good-looking bracelet and you were a good-looking kid and the two of you looked awfully well together." "It's a—a slave bracelet, isn't it?" she asked, timid-He smiled. "I guess that's what it's call "That's what they said," she stammered on, "and they said if a rich man gives you one and you wear it, then that's a sign that you belong to him—" "I don't mind if they say that," he replied, quietly and seriously.

"Well, I do!" she spoke with spirit, eyes flashing. More urgently, Steve continued. "You like me, don't you? I know you like me—I can tell." "Yes," Billie admitted.

CHAPTER 27.

Steve was closer to Billie, one foot raised to the bottom step. "And I like you," he said, his voice pitched romantically-"and-I want to be able to do things for you and-"

Billie shook her head. "It isn't fair to you-thatmean, I can't take this bracelet off you because it would not be fair—" And as he protested—"I s'pose I should-n't have let you take me out at all, Mr. Crandall, because I know it sounds silly, but I'm 1 ot that kind of a girl, that's all." Her cheeks were burning.
"Maybe that's why I like you," he returned, undaunt-

Billie wanted so badly to explain, but it was so difficult. "I know there's nothing wonderful about being the way I am—I mean being virtuous, I s'pose you call it—I know lots of the best-hearted girls in the world that aren't, so, it isn't that; but I mean it isn't fair for me to keep your bracelet because that's the way I am.'

"Well, listen, baby, have I ever tried to pull any rough stuff?" he demanded. "No, you haven't," she acknowledged, "and that's what I always say—"

He interrupted. "Then why haven't I got as much After a pause, she said, "Well, you're married, of course and—"

"No, I'm not!" denied Steve, assuming surprise like an expert.

"They said you was."

"No, I'm divorced-I'm all right-I'm divorced twice." And as slie stared at him, eyes all misted and inviting, red lips slightly apart, he said, "Just because you're tere in the show, don't think I regard you in a light ray-no indeed-I'm no fly-by-night-I'm a very sin sort of person, baby, and I want you to understand ow I feel about you. I'm crazy : bout you. Honest, no ooling'-" His voice sank to a deep whisper; his arms reached out and drew her to him. The perfume I her tumbled hair maddened him-"Don't listen to noody but me, kiddie-'cause I'll treat you right--'he reathed against her white, blue-veined throat. She eaned away from him, her heart beating wildly. She vas afraid, yet filled with an unknown longing-

And then, Roy Lane appeared at the head of the airs. "Mazie wants to see you right away, Billie!" te called and Billie fled, brushing past Roy and plunging for her dressing-room.

Srandall stood glaring up at the little hoofer, who, ummoning up his courage, started down the stairs, try ng to look utterly unconcerned. When he reached Steve, Steve said grimly: "Say, listen, actor, did any me ever hit you right on the nose?" Roy looked at him impudently. "Yeh, once-come to think of it-twice. Why?" "I was wondering if you'd like to have it happen

"What did I ever do to you?" Roy wanted to know

m wide-eyed innocence. Then Steve, thinking better of it, recovered his salm- "Nothing-you couldn't-" he said, and called back over his houlder as he strolled into the cabaret-"I was a sucker to get sore. Forget it."

Forget it, nothing! Forget that he saw Billie in hat big stiff's arms-and not protesting much, either! This was the last blow; He'd speak now! There was so other way about it! Maybe even now it was too late! Dejectedly, he walked toward the prop table.

The voice of Mazie called from the top of the stairs, 'Hey, Oilcan, what is this?" And looking up. Roy Lane aw her glaring at him over the railing, dressed sketchly for her next number. Behind her, Billie appeared, etill in the becoming Hawaiian costume.

"She never said she wanted me at ail!" Billie ac sused, running down the stairs. "You had no right to say that, Roy!" "What I done was for the best," Roy said with aurt dignity. "I had to get you out of hearing so I could chase that twenty-five-c nt guy out of here." Mazie came down the stairs as he "spoke, "Lis-

Of course such statement are very flattering but they can also be quite harmful. I cannot see why you are at all obligated to accept this boy's friendship if you do not care to. I personally think you are much too young to be concerned about such a matter and would advise you to talk the entire problem over with your mother and be guided by her advice.
